The Colon Cancer Alliance (CCA) is a national patient advocacy organization dedicated to ending the suffering caused by colorectal cancer. In order to increase screening and survivorship rates, the CCA provides education and patient support, furthers research efforts, and conducts advocacy work across the country. The CCA offers information and support from the first-hand experience of survivors and others whose lives have been touched by this disease. Educating the public about this cancer is a critical part of the CCA’s mission since colorectal cancer is preventable through screening. As the Voice of Survivors, the CCA works as an advocate for colorectal cancer patients and their families to change the reality of colorectal cancer.

The CCA was founded in 1999 by a small group of individuals who had been touched by colorectal cancer. They recognized the importance of promoting public awareness and providing support and education for those affected by the disease. Today, the CCA leads multiple national programs and provides information and services to nearly a half million people each year.

The growth and success of the organization is due in large part to caring volunteers who devote considerable time, skill and energy to achieving the CCAs vision. Our Guiding Principles are as follows:

Patient support  The CCA provides patient support through a caring community of peers and experts. We also offer a variety of disease management services to help patients and their loved ones cope with the effects of this disease.

Education  The CCA offers educational resources including the best and most up-to-date information available about treatments and clinical trials devoted to colorectal cancer. We also work to educate the public and remove financial, medical and psychological barriers that hinder early detection.

Research  The CCA works with other organizations to increase federal, state and private funding for research of all cancers, particularly that which will be devoted to finding more effective treatments and a cure for colorectal cancer.

Advocacy  The CCA is dedicated to advancing and championing the cause of colorectal cancer and healthcare in general at all levels of government.
Our mission is to do all we can to Inform, Prevent and Support.

Dear Members and Friends,

When I reflect upon what the colorectal cancer landscape looked like only ten years ago, I recall there being no patient advocacy organizations fighting for the colorectal cancer patient. At that time, treatments were not very effective and prognoses were grim. Many people were simply not aware of this cancer or how to prevent it. Our founders recognized that there was a desperate need to fill the void for those affected by this disease, and the Colon Cancer Alliance (CCA) was formed. Our mission is to inform people about colorectal cancer, including its prevention and treatment, while supporting the colorectal cancer community.

Today, as we celebrate our ten year anniversary, treatment options are numerous, not to mention far less invasive and far more effective. In fact, metastatic colorectal cancer patients now live four times as long they did just ten short years ago. I know the CCA is making a difference in the fight as evidenced by the nearly 500,000 people who benefited from our education and support services in 2009.

We know that knowledge is power when it comes to colorectal cancer. One of our primary missions is to inform people about this disease. This year, CCA programs such as the Conversations about Colorectal Cancer regional seminar series educated and united people in the fight against colorectal cancer. The CCA also joined forces with the music industry to send the message that screening saves lives at the first annual Stars Go Blue for Colon Cancer benefit concert. We continue to advance our cause with the latest social networking media, including Facebook® and Twitter™. We are excited to see these programs continue to grow as we work with more national and local sponsors, healthcare facilities, and people like you who are determined to make a difference.

In 2009, the Undy 5000 5K saw tremendous growth, raising over $600,000 to support local screening initiatives and the CCA’s patient support services and awareness campaigns. National Dress in Blue Day was also a huge success in its inaugural year, spreading the message to get screened in communities across the country.

In addition to educating the public about colorectal cancer, the CCA also makes a difference through grassroots advocacy efforts. The CCA works with legislators, researchers, regulators, prevention specialists, the business community, the medical community and the media to bring about change. We significantly increased our advocacy efforts in 2009, and the voice of the colorectal cancer community is being heard loud and clear on Capitol Hill.

The CCA is also committed to supporting those affected by this cancer. Our nationwide network of Voices Volunteers continues to impress us with their fortitude, courage and passion. We hosted our annual Voices Volunteer training seminar in 2009, providing this amazing team with valuable educational workshops and networking opportunities. Over the past year, we have seen more individuals taking advantage of our live toll-free Helpline, as well as participating in our popular Buddy Program. The CCA’s online community, My CRC Connections, has also experienced record growth this year as more people turn to the internet for support and education.

Still, we have much more to do. Colorectal cancer is affecting diverse communities in disproportional numbers. There is still a less than acceptable overall screening rate and an alarming increase in the number of younger people diagnosed with this cancer. We have witnessed inconsistent medical care and advice being given to the public about the prevention and management of this disease, particularly in rural communities. The CCA plans to move forward with the development of new programs designed to address these and other issues in the coming year.

The support of donors and contributors across the country is what makes our work possible. We thank you and look forward to working with you as we continue our efforts.

Best wishes,

Andrew Spiegel, CEO
Conversations about Colorectal Cancer Regional Seminars

Now in its third year, the CCA’s regional seminar series, Conversations about Colorectal Cancer, helps colorectal cancer patients and their families better manage their own healthcare, connect with others and have access to the nation’s top experts. Four regional seminars were held in cities across the country in 2009, including Tampa, Philadelphia, New York and San Francisco. Hundreds of people attended this free educational series.

The nation’s leading colorectal cancer healthcare professionals presented the latest information about treatment options and answered questions from attendees. Survivors also had the opportunity to exchange information, share experiences and support one another in their battle against colorectal cancer.

As part of the Conversations about Colorectal Cancer program, the CCA launched two new approaches this year to reach a broader and more diverse audience: webcasts and webinars. Valuable educational information from the Houston Conversations about Colorectal Cancer seminar, conducted in partnership with M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, was made available as a webinar on the CCA’s website. Life Over Cancer: An Integrative Approach to Cancer Treatment, conducted in partnership with the Block Center for Integrative Cancer Treatment, offered information to better understand and cope with the diagnosis and treatment of colorectal cancer via an interactive telephone and internet-based webinar. Frequently asked questions and answers from the webinar are available on the CCA website.

“This seminar was so eye opening for me. My sister is the first one in our family to have cancer, and we don’t know that much about it, so this was very informative.”

- Caregiver

Stars Go Blue for Colon Cancer

On March 24, the CCA hosted the sold out Stars Go Blue for Colon Cancer concert in Nashville, Tennessee to raise awareness about colorectal cancer and its prevention. Held at the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum*, this exclusive event featured some of country music’s finest artists including Vince Gill, Amy Grant and Hal Ketchum. Special guests Jamie O’Neal, Ricky Skaggs. Grammy nominees Charlie Kelley and accordionist LynnMarie Rink also joined the writers’ round to play a few tunes.

Audience members enjoyed an evening filled with acoustic renditions of favorite songs peppered with the artists’ touching and often humorous anecdotes. The intimate setting added to the ambiance of this special event. Inspired and created by four-time Grammy nominee and CCA Board Member Charlie Kelley, who was diagnosed and treated for colon cancer in the fall of 2008, the Stars Go Blue for Colon Cancer concert was a special way to bring attention to the cause. For those who couldn’t make it to the concert, the CCA and Kelley produced a high-definition DVD of the show now available through the CCA website. Sales from this DVD benefit the CCA’s programs as well as the Blue Note Fund, founded by Kelley, to help colorectal cancer patients in need.

Many attendees opened up and shared their own stories. Amy Privette, a Nashville resident, explained that her mother is a colon cancer survivor who is celebrating 11 years in remission. Privette was thrilled that some of her favorite artists had joined in the fight against this cancer.

“What an awesome way to support something that a family member has been through - have a wonderful time at a concert and hear great music.”

- Amy Privette, Nashville, TN
CCF in the News

The Colon Cancer Alliance led the way in 2009 on issues ranging from Medicare coverage for virtual colonoscopies to asking for Congress to pass a new healthcare law protecting cancer patients. Our efforts were followed by the leading news agencies across America.

CEO Andrew Spiegel was featured nationally on the Fox News program The Situation Room and also co-authored an editorial piece which ran in The New York Times. The Wall Street Journal’s editorial board interviewed Mr. Spiegel, which led to published pieces in that paper and many others.

In addition, the CCA’s Dress in Blue Day campaign and Undy 5000 SK events were media darlings in many local markets, garnering millions of media impressions nationwide. Voices Volunteers were also valuable media spokespersons. All of this coverage helped spread the message to “get screened” and “you are not alone” to thousands of people, solidifying us as the Voice of Survivors.

CCA on the Web

CCA Website

With simplified access to information about colorectal cancer and our awareness programs, the CCA website received more than 250,000 hits in 2009, a 31% increase from 2008. Our site boasts more than 400 informative pages and offers answers to complex questions frequently asked by those affected by colorectal cancer. Patients can access detailed information about screening and treatment options as well as additional resources for coping.

Through our website, visitors can also become involved with local programs and events to build relationships with other colorectal cancer survivors. Friends and family members are able to access information on how best to cope with situations and what they can do to help their loved ones.

The CCA’s Profile Page is where our virtual fans are updated about CCA news, can view pictures from past events and learn about upcoming events we are hosting. Fans can also post comments here and often leave suggestions about where next to bring a CCA event.

The CCA also has a Facebook® Group, used to spread the word about our organization. The group has more than 2,000 members, and our patient support advocates take the lead on answering questions from survivors, friends and family members.

twitter® is a social networking service that enables the CCA to send and read messages known as tweets, text-based posts limited to 140 characters. The CCA tweets several times per week on breaking news related to advances in treatment, or upcoming events and general CCA information. Our followers consist of survivors, advocates and cancer advocacy organizations. Follow our Twitter® account at username CCAliance. You can also follow the Undy 5000 SK on Twitter at username Undy5000.
Advocacy

The nearly half million people who use the CCA’s services each year are a powerful voice for the 1.2 million Americans battling colorectal cancer. In 2009, the CCA further solidified its role as a leader in the healthcare advocacy community. In this rapidly changing healthcare environment, several issues were on the forefront for the colorectal cancer community.

As part of the new healthcare law, Congress proposed significant cuts to Medicare reimbursements for medical imaging which we felt would restrict patients’ access to much needed imaging studies. In July 2009, the CCA provided advocacy training and hosted a press conference on Capitol Hill on behalf of 15 national patient advocacy organizations. These groups, representing various cancers, heart disease, multiple sclerosis and other major illnesses, opposed these proposed cuts.

Following the conference, the CCA and other groups met with members of Congress, Health and Human Services and the White House and delivered a joint letter opposing the cuts. During recess, the CCA’s members continued to advocate on the local level by participating in town hall meetings with their legislators in communities across the United States.

A similar event was held in October 2009 with the CCA again taking the lead on behalf of 27 national patient advocacy organizations. Hundreds rallied to express their grave concerns about the drastic reimbursement cuts included in the healthcare reform legislation.

In today’s rapidly changing drug development environment, new life saving technologies now exist for which there are no regulatory laws. The hot topic this year was the debate surrounding a pathway for biosimilars, the term used for approved new versions of biopharmaceutical products. The CCA led a coalition of over 20 patient advocacy groups on the issue to ensure Congress passed a law which protects patients yet promotes innovation. We are happy to report that both the House and Senate proposals for the new healthcare bill contain similar provisions which accomplish both goals.

The CCA engaged in many behind the scenes efforts to promote quality healthcare for all. We provided testimony in front of an FDA subcommittee on approval of a device which administers anesthesia during a colonoscopy which is both cost effective and safe. Consistent with the CCA’s testimony, the subcommittee recommended full FDA approval. The CCA also joined dozens of other patient advocacy groups throughout the year on a variety of issues which were addressed on Capitol Hill. The CCA will continue to increase its presence in Washington to make sure the voices of the millions of Americans whose lives are touched by colorectal cancer are heard.

“I found it very inspiring that we can go and have our voices heard - just average people able to talk to their representatives, and it looks like it’s making a difference.”

– Brian MacLeod, stage IV survivor

Andrew Spangler, CEO, and CCA Board representatives served as front runners of the Prudence Access to Medical Imaging press conference in 2008. events like these helped solidify the CCA’s role as a leader in advocacy communities.

Brian MacLeod, a stage IV colorectal cancer survivor, and his son, Clinton, traveled from the West Coast to Washington, DC to participate in a CCA-led coalition of 27 advocacy organizations to urge policymakers to enhance early diagnosis of blood disorders by promoting access to advanced imaging. MacLeod was one of hundreds of rally participantsocusing their grave concerns about the threat facing 1.2 million colorectal cancer suffers.

Dress in Blue Day

In March 2009, the CCA launched Dress in Blue Day to bring nationwide attention to colorectal cancer and kick off National Colorectal Cancer Awareness Month. Individuals, businesses and community groups across the country participated in the day by wearing blue and urging others to do the same. The goal of the day was to save lives by getting people to talk about colorectal cancer and learn about its prevention.

In its first year, Dress in Blue Day succeeded in raising awareness from coast to coast with thousands of participants nationwide and even some global supporters. Additionally, over 2,000 people participated virtually through the popular networking site Facebook*. Communities everywhere expressed their support in innovative ways. The Capitol in Lincoln, Nebraska was lit up in blue to support the cause. Over in England, bars served blue beer to commemorate the day. Many college campuses, including Vanderbilt University, joined the effort along with major medical centers and hospitals across the United States.

The idea for Dress in Blue Day originated in 2006 when colorectal cancer survivor and CCA Volunteer, Anita Mitchell of Seattle, wanted to find a special way to honor a friend who had recently passed away from colorectal cancer and also recognize those fighting the disease. In 2009, the CCA, excited by the idea, worked with Mitchell to bring national recognition to Dress in Blue Day.

The response we’ve received has been overwhelming, and we are excited to announce that Dress in Blue Day will continue to take place annually on the first Friday of March.

*The Tennessee Titans cheerleaders and Sir Mark Leonard of Summer Medical Group in Gallatin, TN join in the spirit of Dress in Blue Day on March 5th, 2009. This national event encourages individuals, businesses and community groups to wear blue and talk to each other about the importance of colorectal cancer screenings.*

“I feel, through the first Dress in Blue Day, that I helped raise awareness and increased education about colon cancer. I was able to promote this on our local TV station. All of the 200+ staff at the Regional Hematological-Oncology Center wore the ‘Ask Me Why I’m Blue’ stickers as well.”

Martha Raymond, Syracuse, NY

Undy 5000 5K Runs

Created by the CCA in 2008, the Undy 5000 5K Runs are hugely successful and continue to grow at an astonishing rate. In 2009, the Undy 5000 succeeded in five U.S. cities, raising nearly $600,000 to support local screening efforts and patient services and awareness programs of the CCA. Over 4,000 people participated in the events which were held in Philadelphia, Denver, Dallas, Phoenix and St. Louis. A recent survey revealed that nine out of ten 2009 Undy participants would recommend this event to their friends and family. The 2010 Undy series is poised to set new records throughout the United States as we add more cities to the event roster.

The primary goal of the Undy 5000 is to get people talking about colorectal cancer. This disease is the second leading cause of cancer death in the United States and is 90% preventable when people are properly screened. The Undy 5000 encourages discussion by providing custom boxer-style shorts instead of traditional t-shirts for all participants to wear during the event, a tongue-in-cheek reference to the area affected by colorectal cancer.

The response to these events has been overwhelmingly positive. By creating a sense of community and camaraderie among those affected by colorectal cancer and promoting open dialogue, the Undy 5000 5K Runs are making a difference in the fight against colorectal cancer.

People of all ages came out to participate in the Undy 5000 5K Run in 2009. Despite cold temperatures and some rain, the Philadelphia race was one of the CCA’s most successful events of the year, raising over $140,000 to support colorectal cancer screening and awareness efforts.

“The event was perfect in every way – a great cause, hilarious with people running in underwear, family friendly, and personally very meaningful for my family. I plan to participate again and again.”

Jennifer L. Kemp, MD, Denver Undy 5000 Participant
Colon Cancer Alliance Connections Programs

The Buddy Program
Living with uncertainty is the biggest challenge for any person faced with a cancer diagnosis. Even the closest families need outside support and assistance, and who better to provide that help than others who have been there? The CCA created the Buddy Program to provide peer-to-peer support to those affected by colorectal cancer.

Buddies are colorectal cancer survivors, caregivers, family and friends with experience and compassion who are there to listen, offer support and share their experiences. They can provide information on coping with side effects, treatment options, life after a colostomy and dealing with the many emotional issues that come with this cancer.

Each year, nearly 500 colorectal cancer survivors request a Buddy, and many choose to stay in the program to support others in need. Many Buddies have formed ongoing, mutually supportive friendships as a result of participating in the CCA’s Buddy Program. Participants in this unique program are matched based on stage of diagnosis, age, gender and primary concerns. Being diagnosed with cancer is frightening, and having a connection with someone who has already been down the same path is invaluable.

By calling our Helpline, colorectal cancer survivors and their loved ones are instantly connected with a caring staff member who listens to their story and supports them in the wide range of emotions and reactions they might have. The newly diagnosed receive guidance regarding what to expect in the coming months.

Calling our Helpline will also allow someone to discuss all of the CCA’s different support services, including our Buddy Program and our online community, My CRC Connections.

Calls can be made anytime to our Helpline, which is answered live Monday-Friday from 9:30 am to 4:30 pm EST by our trained Patient Support Managers, who have extensive experience helping patients and their caregivers. You may reach the Helpline by dialing 1-877-422-2030.

I lost my father to colon cancer and I want to thank the CCA and my Buddy for the advice and support I’ve received over the last several months. I’m so happy to have found this resource.

–Debbie, Caregiver Buddy

“Thanks so much for your kindness and sensitivity when I spoke with you. I forwarded your response along with the website to my brother. I think it can really help him to deal with this better. Thanks again!”

–Carolyn Hollis

My CRC Connections Online Community

Over 1.2 million Americans have colorectal cancer, yet many individuals feel isolated and alone. Created in 2008 and over 1,800 strong, the CCA’s free online colorectal cancer community, My CRC Connections, is the first social network of its kind. My CRC Connections allows those affected by colorectal cancer to find and communicate with one another conveniently over the internet.

Through My CRC Connections, individuals can connect with others from all over the world who share similar circumstances. Frequent users are survivors, family and friends. Site visitors can search for others by diagnosis, stage and location.

My CRC Connections allows individuals to:

- Seek advice or provide information
- Provide and receive peer support
- Share personal stories and experiences
- Be a part of a community of peers
- Provide updates to loved ones
- Search for others by diagnosis, stage and location

Members can participate in live chats, message boards and create personal pages with photos, videos and blogs. Chat meetings are held the first Wednesday of every month and often feature leaders in the colorectal cancer community.

To join or learn more, simply visit www.myCRCconnections.com.

The CCA Connections Program is supported by Genentech BioChemistry, sanofi aventis, Amgen, Inc, Colson Endo-Surgery and Genesis Health.

“\'I only wish that I had found this site a year ago when all of this began. There are so many things going through your mind in the beginning... so many questions. I often sit and wonder, ‘how do those folks who have no help and/or support make it?’ I look forward to the chats and discussion.”

Voices Volunteer & Chapter Program

Our Voices Volunteer Program gives advocates an opportunity to use their voice to bring the CCA’s mission to the local level. Our Voices Program boasts five official chapters and over 200 Volunteers and Advocates in more than 30 states across the country. Voices Volunteers serve as liaisons to the CCA’s national office and lead efforts in their communities. We provide Volunteers the support and services they need to educate their community about colorectal cancer and screening options as well as help those already affected by the disease.

“I would like to thank you and all of the CCA staff who worked so very hard in putting everything together for Denver. Attending this seminar was one of the most positive life experiences I have ever had. What awesome people!”

– Joyce Giarraputo, Voices of Rhode Island Chapter

In 2009, CCA Buddies, Chapter Leaders and Ambassadors convened in Denver, CO for our annual CCA Volunteer Training Seminar. The seminar provided attendees with information about colorectal cancer, the CCA’s programs, and training on how to bring the CCA’s mission back to their communities. Chapter Leaders and Ambassadors were able to engage in information sharing and networking. Among the highlights were workshops on listening and communication skills, fundraising and grant writing. The CCA is grateful to have had this opportunity to connect with our Volunteers and provide them with further resources in the local fight against colorectal cancer. Their professionalism, dedication and passion is truly inspiring.

“Thank you to you and your awesome staff for organizing this and getting us to Denver for the training. This training was very helpful and inspiring to us. As always, I am awestruck by the survivors and caregivers. This has truly recharged our batteries and lets us know that we are not alone in this fight to spread awareness across the United States!”

– Shawn-Marie Linsenmayer, Voices of Central Arizona Chapter

The 2009 Voices Program was supported by sanofi aventis.

Grants of Voices Volunteers and Ambassadors convened in Denver, CO for the annual CCA Volunteer Training Seminar. Attendees rated the quality of the curriculum and the opportunity to network with other volunteers.

How Can I help?

The CCA is committed to changing the current reality and increasing the hope for those coping with the pain of colorectal cancer. We provide support to colorectal cancer survivors, their friends and family. We advocate for increased funding for colorectal cancer research and screening programs and work to increase public awareness of the disease and the importance of early detection. We continually explore ways to extend our capabilities, enhance our services and broaden our educational and advocacy activities. To accomplish these goals, we rely on the support of our many volunteers and donors nationwide.

Donate Directly to the CCA

The CCA relies on donations from groups and individuals who believe in saving lives and increasing awareness about colorectal cancer. Many choose to make a gift in honor or memory of someone special. Your contribution will provide funding to support the CCA’s educational and patient support activities throughout the year. Make a donation online at www.ccalliance.org or mail your tax-deductible donation to:

Workplace Giving

Many employers now offer an opportunity to give to a charitable cause through convenient payroll deduction, and several will match their employees’ gifts. Please contact your human resources office to learn more about giving in your workplace.

Become a Buddy

Living with uncertainty is the biggest challenge for any person faced with a cancer diagnosis. Even the closest families need outside support, and who better to provide that support than those who have been there? If you are a colorectal cancer survivor or caregiver, consider becoming a buddy. Please visit our website, www.ccalliance.org, or call our toll-free Helpline at 1-877-422-2030 to learn more.

Volunteer with our Voices Program

We are dedicated to providing education and support to those affected by colorectal cancer. Our Voices Volunteer and Chapter Program is a nationwide network of local volunteers who lead colorectal cancer awareness, education and efforts in their communities. The CCA firmly believes that one voice can save a life, and by providing Voices across the country, we hope to provide that chance to every community.

Get Involved with the Undy 5000 5K Runs

These events are growing so fast that we need your help! Whether or not you actually run in one of these events, we still need you. Maybe you have a special skill or local connections that could help us pull off an amazing event. Local volunteers are always welcome. Corporate sponsorships are also available. Please visit www.undy5000.org to register or to learn about other ways you can help.

Advocate for the Cause

Rates of colorectal cancer have decreased in the past decade, but certain populations continue to disproportionately suffer from this disease due to poverty, minimal to no insurance and a lack of access to primary care providers. The CCA is fighting for legislation that guarantees all Americans equal access to affordable and comprehensive medical coverage. Will you help? Stand up for the common good. Join us in our advocacy efforts, and make your voice heard.

Share your Story

The personal stories of survivors can offer hope and inspiration to those affected by colorectal cancer. Contact us if you have a story to tell. We also urge you to join My CRC Connections, the CCA’s Online Community, which allows you to connect with thousands of people across the world who are sharing similar circumstances.
